Certainly. Based on the measurements provided:

- Height: 160 cm (1.60 m)
- Weight: 110 kg
- BMI: 43.0 kg/m²
- This falls in the Class III obesity range.
- The doctor's goal of reducing 40 kg would bring the weight to about 70 kg. This should be approached gradually and under medical/dietitian supervision.

For a working professional, the plan below emphasizes high protein, vegetables/fiber, controlled portions, and minimal added sugar/fried foods.

Simple rules for the working week

- 1. Water: Aim for roughly 2–3 L/day unless his doctor has given a fluid restriction.
- 2. Tea/coffee: Prefer without sugar; avoid biscuits/snacks alongside them.
- 3. Snacks if hungry: One fruit, buttermilk, unsweetened curd, or a small portion of roasted chana/sprouts.
- 4. Avoid/limit: Sugary drinks, sweets, fried foods, chips, bakery foods, alcohol, and frequent restaurant meals.
- 5. Rice: Keep the portion controlled rather than completely eliminating it.
- 6. Protein: Include a protein source at every meal—eggs, dal, beans, fish, chicken, paneer, tofu, or curd.
- 7. Dinner: Ideally finish 2–3 hours before bedtime.

8. Activity: Follow the doctor's advice regarding walking/exercise, particularly because BMI is around 43.

Important: A 40-kg reduction is a substantial long-term goal. It is generally better to target steady weight loss rather than crash dieting. Because the BMI is in the Class III obesity range, calorie targets and exercise should ideally be individualized by his doctor/registered dietitian, especially if he has diabetes, hypertension, sleep apnea, kidney/liver disease, or takes regular medication.
